DRUG INFORMANT MANAGEMENT

Description

Confidential Informants can be one of the best investigative tools law enforcement personnel have access to. However, confidential informants present unique challenges to agencies, law enforcement officers, and administrators. This course will provide the student with the knowledge and skill set to handle and maintain professional relationships with informants.

This course will empower the student with the ability to effectively walk through policies related to confidential informants, document actions of the informant, and use the information collected by informants to strengthen cases and prosecutions.

This course will provide law enforcement personnel with an accelerated introduction to the dark underworld of being a “handler” and maintaining control over an informant. Students will explore and learn the “Best Practices” employed by a senior task force investigator. This course will emphasize learning by participating in activities involving actual and relevant informant situations and working through the most common problems when dealing with informants. No prior knowledge of narcotics training is required.

Who Should Attend

This class is designed for any active law enforcement personnel, support staff, or administrative assistants. Prior experience is not required.

Material Requirements

Students should bring a laptop with unfettered internet capabilities. Students will receive course materials related to the topic at time of class, either via physical or digital delivery.
