Peer Support

Peer Support is much more than responding to high stress events. Peer support is taking care of your fellow officers through a current crisis, or a crisis that may have happened decades ago. No one knows a law enforcement officer like a law enforcement officer. The same is true for dispatchers. True peer support is far more than critical incident management. This course teaches officers and dispatchers specific methods to assist others in officer involved shootings and other uses of force; the everyday stress and strain of the job,; line of duty deaths; suicide recognition and prevention in fellow officers, and family survival in law enforcement; and “coaching sessions”.

Peer Support is not just a class, it is a life changing event. This may be a bold statement, but read what former attendees have said about this course:

“I wish every single cop, if not every human being, could take this course and learn what it takes to survive and thrive, and to help others survive and thrive.”

“This class is by far the best in my career and will assist me in so many ways!”

“I came into this class with a negative view of peer support and the thought of I didn’t need to be here. This class has completely changed my view and I am a firm believer/supporter of peer support. This week at RCTA has literally saved and changed my life. This class has also given me new tools to use as a leader in my department.”

“This class was amazing! So much more than I was expecting. So awesome to connect with other law enforcement professionals and share knowledge.”

“This course is needed for every agency. Anyone going through trauma or struggling has got to come to this course! Thank you RCTA for going above and beyond to make sure men and women in blue are taken care of.”

“16 years in law enforcement and this was the first class that literally affected my life. It had a profound impact on me.”

Most courses teach you how to deal with citizens; however, this course teaches you how to deal with other officers, and yourself! This is a must attend course for surviving a law enforcement career.
